FOURTH SUNDAY AFTER EPIPHANY From Divine Intimacy

In today’s liturgy, especially the Gospel, Jesus appears in our midst as the ruler of the elements, the conqueror of all tempests. Let us think of all the persecutions which have beaten against Peter’s barque, the Church, down through the ages; or we can think of the trials which God still permits individual souls to undergo. Whatever happens, the spirit of faith tells us that every struggle and tempest is willed or at least permitted by God: everything is the result of His infinite love. God is not a tyrant who crushes us, but a Father, who tests us because He loves us. If He permits sorrow, interior or exterior trials, personal or public vicissitudes, it is only to draw out of them some greater good. Virtue and goodness are strengthened in time of difficulty: the efforts made in bearing trials tend to make us surpass what we would have done had we enjoyed perfect calm.

“Why are you fearful, O ye of little faith?” If we are disturbed and upset by trials, it means that we lack faith. Even when God conceals himself, when everything seems to fail us and we feel terribly alone, we can be absolutely certain that God will never abandon us if we do not first abandon Him. Instead of becoming bitter or falling into despair, it is the moment to intensify our faith, to make strong acts of faith. St Therese of the Child Jesus used to say, “I count on Him. Suffering may go to its limit, but I am sure He will never abandon me.”
